

Commerce Department Student Feedback Report

The Department of Commerce conducted a student survey with 60+ students from batch 22 and even alums to gain feedback on the functioning of the department.

The questionnaire began with questions around academics. 95% of the students think that the professors are prompt and consistent in how they run classes, whereas 5% are unsure. 82.5% feel that the academic resources are disseminated properly by the union and the syllabus is covered on time. However, when it comes to using instructional aids like PPTs, videos, podcasts, and Ted Talks during lectures, 47.5% of the respondents are neutral. The children want additional hands-on learning resources so that the classroom may be engaging and dynamic.

The majority of students believe that lecturers promptly address academic questions and that assignments and internal exams are held in accordance with the university's schedule. But when it comes to providing feedback on these assignments, one-third of the student body holds a neutral stance.

The next section of the questionnaire focused on extra-curricular activities. 42% of students responded favourably when asked if professors give enough advice on extracurricular activities and future career prospects. Rest are neutral. Additionally, according to 55% of respondents, association events including online talks, seminars, and academic meetings are engaging, participatory, and useful learning environments for students. The majority of students also believe that college societies are engaging, participatory, and regularly host events.

Talking about opportunities, out of the students who are interested in research, 42% feel that enough research opportunities are disseminated by the department and 60% believe that college provides a stage for engaging with social impact and related issues.

The last section of the survey covered questions on student support. 90% students feel comfortable in availing the support of the staff members in both the online and the offline mode. Nearly 80% of students think their teachers are approachable, willing to help, and satisfied with their prompt actions.

Conclusion:

Overall, the results of the student survey conducted by the Department of Commerce indicate that the majority of students have a positive opinion of the academic resources and teaching methods provided by the department. However, there is room for improvement in terms of incorporating more interactive and practical teaching aids into lectures. Furthermore, the students have mixed opinions on the feedback provided on assignments, and the department may consider ways to improve this aspect. The extra-curricular activities and opportunities provided by the department are also generally well-received by the students, with a majority of respondents feeling positively about the guidance provided on future career options and the engagement provided by the college societies and association events. Additionally, students feel comfortable availing support from staff members and teachers, and are satisfied with their prompt actions. It is important to note that the results of this survey should be taken into account by the department in order to identify areas of improvement and to continue to provide the best possible academic and extracurricular experience for the students.
